2. Troops were seen drilling with heavy AA guns at Camp Apetlon on 2 August. The gun barrels were from 4 to 4.5 meters long and mounted a muzzle brake with six vertical baffles. In addition, two canvas-covered searchlights were noticed in the camp. Other gun crews were observed at aiming practice with one officer relaying data from the range finder to each gun crew. Truck [redacted] was identified near a generator-charging station.
3. Following a break of about eight days, firing practice was resumed on the morning of 5 August. The break was allegedly made because of harvesting.
